Taxation Policy

In the recent years, many countries are becoming concerned about tax erosion caused by the allocation of taxable profit to the places other than where business activities take place. These concerns also create financial pressure on public budgets.

In this regard, the G20 member countries have requested the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) to review international tax rules to remedy the weaknesses in the taxation system. Akfen Construction has adopted the principle of working in full compliance with the tax regulations applicable in the countries where it operates, based on the international tax system recommendations published by the OECD.

This discipline supports the Sustainable Development Goals of Decent Work and Economic Growth because it contributes to the financing of public needs and thus to the society.

- Akfen Construction submits tax returns on time in all countries where it operates, and it pays all taxes on time.
- It has prepared the necessary technological infrastructure for the planning and management of additional taxes.
- It uses central planning and management to manage additional taxes on the basis of countries.
